West Sac business beat: solar project, new realty office, proposed gym

■ Local Wal-Mart store may join Ikea, with solar panels on its rooftop -- company says the 'green' move will save shareholders money

Wal-Mart is considering the installation of solar energy panels on the rooftop of its West Sacramento store, as part of a campaign to put the panels on about 65 stores in the state. The plan is for installer SolarCity to own, install and maintain the panels.

According to the company, the panels are expected to generate up to 70 million kilowatt hours of energy and prevent 21,700 metric tons of carbon dioxide from going into the air. The panels would also generate 20-30% of a store's energy needs while saving money and creating jobs, claims Wal-Mart.

The Ikea store near Wal-Mart in the Reed Avenue area finished its own solar project this summer, plugging in a 65,000-square foot array of over 2,500 panels and "aiming for 795,500 kWh of clean electricity annually -- the equivalent of reducing 630 tons of carbon dioxide, eliminating the emissions of 109 cars or powering 69 homes yearly," said an Ikea spokesperson.

West Sacramento Realtors Chris Palamidessi and Marty Swingle formed Capital West Realty at 1355 Halyard Drive, Suite 100, in West Sacramento.

CHRIS PALAMIDESSI

MARTY SWINGLE

The pair formerly worked at Lyon Real Estate's office in Southport.

Palamidessi is owner/broker at the new firm.

"I am excited to embark on this new venture with Marty Swingle and look forward to continuing and exceeding our performance records," he remarked in a press release.

The pair are both West Sacramento residents. Palamidessi is part of the family that owns the long-time Club Pheasant restaurant, and is involved in the Our Lady of Grace school and parish, and in a local Rotary Club.

Swingle is president of the Yolo chapter of Habitat for Humanity, serves on a city housing commission -- and plays drums for a local band called "Lady and the Tramps."

An Elk Grove man has applied for a city permit to open a "Fitness Systems" gym at 2531 Evergreen Avenue in West Sacramento. A city agenda item describes the project as about 25,000 square feet, and slated for weights, a cardio room, aerobics room, locker rooms and child care in a building owned by the Ramos Trust.

Sean Covell is the applicant. The matter is scheduled for consideration in front of the planning commission on Dec. 1.

The gym would provide a fitness alternative to the city recreation center in Southport and to Muscle Systems, a Sacramento Avenue gym in the north. Another private gym on 15th Street in central West Sacramento went out of business earlier this year.

Buckeye Terminals at 1700 South River Road has applied for an extension of a city permit to operate and offload rail cars carrying ethanol. The terminal was formerly known as BP/Arco, and is part of an old industrial region along the Sacramento River for which local officials ultimately have other plans. The city hopes to phase out the "tank farms" along the river and replace them with more upscale land uses.

The permit request will be heard Dec. 1 by the planning commission.

New parade draws a pretty good crowd

The damp skies showed some mercy, and the first try at a Veterans Day Parade down Park Boulevard last Friday went off pretty smoothly. A reported estimated the crowd along the route as certainly into the hundreds, if not a thousand spectators.

A few drizzles came as the participants were lining up at Westmore Oaks Elementary School on Clarendon Street.

"I'll bet if it didn't rain, we would have had way more people," said organizer Debbie Reynolds of Eskaton, the parade's chief sponsor. But she added that the whole venture went off pretty well.

"I was surprised how well everyone put together their parade entry," said Reynolds. "I hope to do it again next year."

The parade featured a tribute to the veterans -- including seven of them serving as grand marshals and one, Ron Jones of Channel 13, serving as MC. There was also a Vietnam War-era helicopter, a mounted crew from the West Sacramento Trail Riders Association, cheerleading troupes who performed dangerous-looking aerial stunts over the asphalt, and the Cal Aggie Marching Band.

School district celebrates test scores

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

School district staff, administration and guests had dinner at a "State of the District" event on Nov. 1 at the River City High School campus. The upbeat event featured a keynote address by board president David Westin, and was largely a celebration of two years of big growth in district-wide student test scores.

Westin told the crowd that within a few years, he expects all the district's schools to hit the 800-point benchmark in the state's API testing.

"We've seen a 38-point increase at River City High School in the last two years, and typically a high school is the hardest to move," he said. "The myth is that kids cannot get a great education in this district. As the parent of a child in the district, I disagree."

Washington Unified has become "the top performing school district in the Sacramento region in the last two years," said Westin. He based that claim on the district's 48-point growth in API scores over those years (not on the scores themselves).

Westin told the News-Ledger earlier this month that he credits a new policy of accountability in the district for the scores -- he said WUSD is finally making sure every administrator gets a regular performance evaluation, for example.

DIANE SMITH, principal at Westmore Oaks Elementary, receives congratulations from WUSD superintendent Dayton Gilleland and from Dave Westin, the school board president. Smith's school joined the "800 club" -- the group of schools that has achieved the 800-point benchmark for API student test results. Westmore joins Southport and Bridgeway Island elementary schools in that group.

At the dinner on Nov. 1, he also celebrated the implementation of one of his initiatives to give parents more power and involvement in their child's education. Westin gave certificates of appreciation to fellow board members Sandra Vargas, Adam Menke, Mary Leland and Teresa Blackmore for their work on this and other board president initiatives.

He also promised to keep working on building a partnership with the local city government -- a relationship that has sometimes been testy -- and said he would ask for a joint meeting of the school board and city council.

"We will continue to reach out to the mayor and city council to have a stronger partnership... and will invite the mayor and council to a planning session," Westin promised. "I do not see how we can become the premier city in the region if we don't have a strong partnership."

Westin outlined a new "board president's initiative" for the coming year. He said WUSD would connect with number of other California districts, such as Cupertino and Menlo Park, to compare notes on what new programs work and which don't.

"Do we really need to reinvent the wheel on everything," asked Westin?

Remembering Lillian Domasky

Note: Lifelong West Sacramento resident Lillian Domasky passed away last week and she and her late husband, Bob, were like second-parents to me back when I was a teenager and their son, John, was my best friend. She was kind and caring and full of compliments and she always made it fun to hang out at John's house. She also had a great sense of humor, smiled easily, and knew how to enjoy this life. She will be greatly missed by all of us who knew and loved her and below, in her memory, is an article I wrote many years ago about the life she and her beloved husband, Bob, made for themselves and their family in West Sacramento.

Bob Domasky's grandfather on his mother's side of the family was the proud owner of a horse and buggy taxi fleet in 19th century Russia.

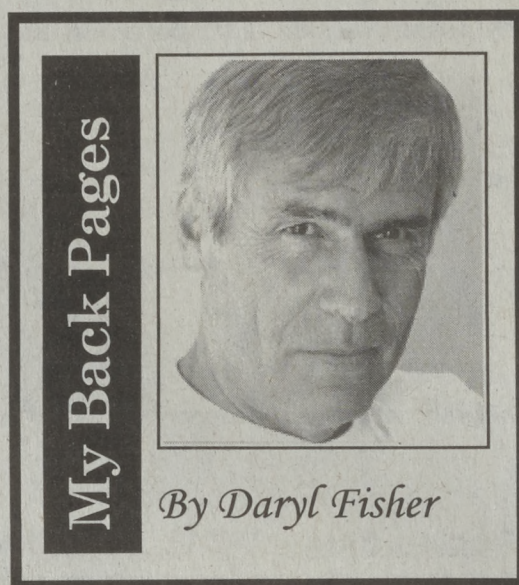

"For some reason," explained Bob, "he decided to move the whole family to China and set up business there. When that didn't work out, he moved to Kobe, Japan, and then later answered an advertisement for sugar cane workers in Hawaii."

By the early 1900s, the family had saved up enough money from working in the sugar cane fields to afford steamer passage to San Francisco.

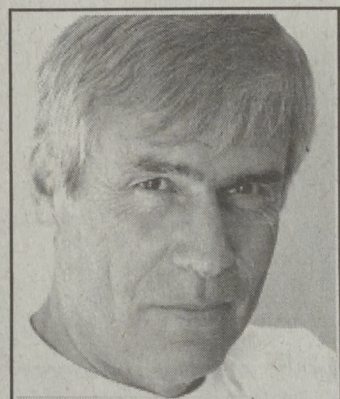

"There was a huge Russian community in San Francisco around the turn of the century," explained Bob, "and that is where my mother met and married my father. Then, in 1911, the whole family moved to Bryte and bought a little three-room house on Solano Street. For a half-dozen years or so, my grandfather made a living hunting and selling rabbits, which were still everywhere in this area when I was young. Then, around 1917, my father went up to Seattle for awhile and worked in the shipyards, and that is where his boss decided Domavskisky was too hard to pronounce and changed it to Domasky."

Bob remembers growing up in Bryte as some of the very best years of his life.

"It was during The Great Depression and jobs and money were hard to come by, but the people in our neighborhood were really wonderful. There were warm and friendly Russian families all around us — four on our street, six on Yolo Street, and three more on Water Street. They all got together and built the Russian Peoples Community Building, and every weekend they would have dances there, and sometimes they would put on Russian plays, too. Those were some really great times!"

While Bob Domasky was growing up in Bryte, Lillian Perini was doing the same thing just down the road in Broderick, and the only difference was that she was surrounded by wonderful Italian families.

"There were the Novelli's, the Perucci's, the Guastali's, the Brunelli's, the Olivastri's, the Fava's, the Bonetti's, The Delaini's, the Luigi's, and many, many more," said Lillian. "And we had our dances, too — over at the old Washington Firehouse. In fact, I met Bob at one of those dances. So I guess if there's one thing you can say about most of the people who grew up in Bryte and Broderick, it's that we were pretty good dancers, because we had lots of practice."

Before Bob married Lillian, he joined the Marines shortly after the bombing of Pearl Harbor and soon found himself island-hopping in the Pacific Ocean. On February 18, 1943, about four hours into the hard-fought invasion of Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands, Bob was shot in the head. He was evacuated to a nearby hospital ship, where he was stabilized, and then sent to Hawaii, and finally back to the mainland for surgery.

"They put a metal plate in my head," said Bob, "and it took me awhile to learn how to walk and talk again, but I was pretty lucky.

I still get headaches sometimes when the plate gets too hot or cold, but a lot of really good young men never got off that island."

After the war, Bob came back to Bryte and went to work for PG&E.

"But most of the people I knew in Bryte and Broderick worked for the railroad back then," recalled Bob, "and I can still remember how everyone set their time by the old SP railroad shop's whistle, which blew every day at seven in the morning and three in the afternoon. You could hear it real clear from where we lived."

Bob and Lillian have been married for more than 50 years and have three children, John, Tommy and Paulette, all of whom attended and graduated from local schools. "We got engaged on my mother's birthday," said Lillian, "and it's worked out pretty well. I guess the only thing he ever did which really bothered me was that he'd take off and go hunting almost every weekend."

"And I did a lot of fishing, too!" added Bob with a smile.

When Lillian thinks back to her days of growing up in Broderick, she recalls how everyone spoke mostly her parents' native language at home.

"I can still remember how everyone who came to visit my mother always spoke Italian," said Lillian, "and I used to love to just sit and listen to them talk. It was a different time back then. We didn't have hardly anything to speak of — no cars, no fancy clothes, nothing like that. And for entertainment there was only the radio and the dances, so mostly we entertained ourselves."

"You could spend a whole day fishing in some of the nearby canals," said Bob, "which I really loved to do, and if you wanted some spending money, or wanted to buy something

'And we had our dances, too — over at the old Washington Firehouse,' said Lillian. 'In fact, I met Bob at one of those dances. So I guess if there's one thing you can say about most of the people who grew up in Bryte and Broderick, it's that we were pretty good dancers, because we had lots of practice.'

nice to wear, you could always go pick hops. But what I guess I remember most about those days were the Sundays, especially in the summertime. All the different families would take turns having their friends over to their house to visit, play cards, and of course eat. And you wouldn't believe some of the food they used to serve. Boy, there were some really great cooks back then."

"I think we both feel very fortunate to have grown up in Bryte and Broderick," said Lillian. "I can still remember saving up ten cents and then walking across the I Street Bridge with my girlfriends to go see a Saturday matinee movie at the old Fox theater in downtown Sacramento. We didn't have much, but we had each other, and it really was like being part of one big, happy family. Everybody knew everybody else, and it sure was a great time and place to be young."

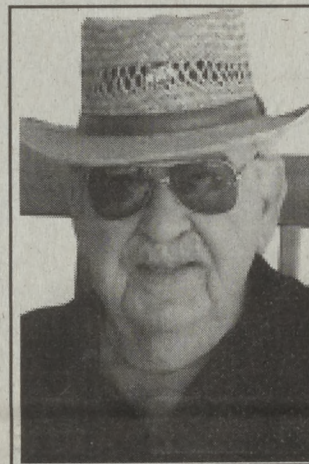

Godspeed, Lil.

'Thundering Herd' puts an end to Raider season

River City High's varsity football team made it to the playoffs for the second year in a row – but was eliminated in the first round on Friday evening in Elk Grove.

The Raiders compiled a 5-5 record on the regular season, which, although a few wins shy of last year's attention-getting season, earned them a playoff berth. The Raiders drew the Elk Grove "Thundering Herd" in the first round – a squad that went undefeated in 2011 and would have the advantage of defending their home field.

The "Herd" dominated the game, compiling a 49-0 win.

No doubt the returning Raider players are already thinking about next year.

GO FIGURE!

by Linda Thistle

"Super 8" (PG-13) -- Remember when a blockbuster movie wasn't necessarily a franchise flick? When Steven Spielberg used equal parts special effects and imagination-massaging storytelling in his science-fiction features? "Super 8" will bring it all flooding back. The immortal Spielberg teamed up with today's sci-fi darling, JJ Abrams (creative force behind "Fringe," "Cloverfield," and the latest "Star Trek") to make this nostalgia-fueled popcorn flick.

It's 1979, and a group of small-town youngsters are shooting their own monster movie when they witness a sudden train wreck. Lost dogs and inexplicable phenomena become the chief local export as the plot thickens and the lovable scamps get closer to unraveling some serious movie magic.

"Sarah's Key" (PG-13) -- An

Kristin Scott Thomas

American journalist with a French husband starts pulling on a historical thread, and finds revealing connections between her life and the life of a French girl who lost everything in the holocaust. The film's engine lies in its star, Kristin Scott Thomas as Julia, whose character navigates a clouded moral landscape of guilt and survival.

The story has considerable emotional weight, as Julia learns that her life in the present may have benefited from monstrous acts committed not so far into the past. The parallel stories of Julia and Sarah do seem a little imbalanced; Julia suffers in an unhappy marriage in the present, while Sarah is a young Jewish girl in Nazi-occupied France.

"Rushmore" [Blu-ray] (R) -- Wes Anderson's breakthrough 1998 film about an especially odd teenager finally makes it to a Criterion Collection Blu-ray release. This is the film that gave Jason Schwartzman his start, put Wes Anderson on the map, and gave audiences their first look at the new era of Bill Murray. Quiet, contemplative and categorically eccentric, "Rushmore" is a rare and re-watchable kind of movie.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"Conan the Barbarian" (R) -- This pretender to the throne has nothing on its 1982 namesake in terms of power, visuals or even emotion. Newcomer Jason Momoa (you may recognize him from his previous barbarian role as Khal Drogo from HBO's "Game of Thrones") had Mr. Universe size shoes to fill, and about two hours of awful storytelling working against him.

I've been assured there is a plot. I only ascertained frustrating than exhilarating. This new Conan just can't answer the riddle of steel, or the riddle of why a classic had to be defiled to cash in on the 3-D trend.

"Pearl Harbor: FDR Leads the Nation Into War" by Steven M. Gillon (Basic Books, $25.99)

"Pearl Harbor Christmas: A World at War, December 1941" by Stanley Weintaub (Da Capo, $24) Reviewed by Larry Cox

During the late summer and early autumn of 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt and top senior advisers assumed that an attack by the Japanese was imminent. U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull observed that Japan was actively engaged on "a mission of conquest of the entire Pacific" and that its government had a "long record of duplicity in international dealings."

Roosevelt, after reading secret coded messages from the Japanese in early December, knew that the chance for peace had been lost, but believed the Japanese target would be British Malaya, the Dutch West Indies or perhaps the Philippines. Little did he realize that the attack would occur much closer to home.

This Dec. 7 marks the 70th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor and our entry into World War II. Although dozens of books have been written about the subject, two new accounts are exceptional pieces of historical reporting about one of the defining events of the 20th century.

"Pearl Harbor" by Steven M. Gillon, a professor of history at the University of Oklahoma, documents the 24 hours that followed the attack, beginning with the first dispatches received at the White House through FDR's address to Congress the next day. As fast paced as any novel, Gillon provides readers with a dramatic examination of this crucial juncture in our history.

Talking Turkey

Preparing a turkey for the first time can be a daunting task, unless you know a few tricks. No matter how many guests are expected -- whether it's dinner for four or 24, allow 1 pound of turkey per person. I never buy a turkey more than 14 pounds, as it's easier to cook two turkeys than it is to wrestle a turkey weighing 25 plus pounds in and out of the oven.

I cook one turkey the day before Thanksgiving. I let it rest and carve it ahead of time, cover it with basting juices and aluminum foil to keep it moist, and reheat it to serve during the meal. I also roast a turkey on Thanksgiving day. It's my "show" bird -- the one I display whole on a decorated platter. While my guests are serving themselves, I can carve the other turkey without feeling rushed.

When selecting a turkey, it's better to pick an unstuffed turkey for safety reasons, and then season and baste the bird yourself so that you can control the quality of the ingredients. The "pop-up" timer that you find in some brands of turkey usually only pops up when the turkey is overcooked! If you want to use a brand with a timer, leave it in place until the turkey is ready to carve, but use a conventional meat thermometer to check your bird for doneness.

Forgetting to thaw out the turkey is a common mistake that many cooks make during the holidays. Allow approximately 24 hours for every 4 to 5 pounds of turkey, approximately three to seven days before Thanksgiving. Thaw the turkey in the refrigerator on a rimmed pan to catch any drips or in a cooler kept at 38 F.

If you're preparing a turkey for the first time, my recipe for this Easy Holiday Turkey is a great way to begin. Read over the instructions a few days before the holidays, purchase and prep your ingredients ahead of time, and enjoy your Thanksgiving with a lot less stress!

EASY HOLIDAY TURKEY

1 (12 to 14 pound) turkey (not self-basting)
3/4 cup canola oil
3 tablespoons poultry seasoning
1 1/2 tablespoons kosher salt
2 tablespoons freshly ground black pepper
1 stick unsalted butter, melted

Aromatics:
2 medium onions, peeled and chopped
3 large carrots, chopped,
2 large apples, cored and chopped
2 to 3 sprigs of fresh rosemary, thyme, sage, parsley, in any combination
6 sage leaves
1/2 cup water or chicken broth

1. Adjust the oven racks to the lowest level of the oven.

Preheat oven to 500 F.

2. Pull the package containing the neck and giblets out of the neck and interior rear cavity of the turkey (neck cavity may be covered with a flap of skin). Set the liver, heart and giblets aside to use for the gravy. Reserve the turkey neck to use with the aromatics for the basting broth.

3. Rinse the turkey with cold water inside and out. Dry the turkey skin with food-safe paper towels. The turkey will not brown if the skin is still wet. The turkey probably will have the legs trussed in a metal or plastic clamp. Release the legs from the clamp and discard the truss. This will allow the dark meat on the legs to cook faster.

4. Rub the turkey inside and out with the canola oil. Sprinkle turkey all over, inside and out with the poultry seasoning, salt and pepper.

5. Fill the turkey with half of the aromatics -- chopped onions, carrots, apples and herbs. Place the turkey neck and the rest of the aromatics in the bottom of the roasting pan with the water or chicken broth.

6. Place a sheet of aluminum foil on a roasting rack and place it inside of a roasting pan. Using the tip of a knife, poke 20 to 30 holes in the foil. Place the turkey, breast-side down, on the foil-covered rack. Roast for 30 minutes (set the timer on the oven to prevent overcooking).

7. Turn the temperature down to 325 F. Turn the turkey breast-side up and tuck wing tips underneath the bird. Baste, inside and out, with the melted butter and the juices that have collected in the bottom of the roasting pan.

8. Roast for 1 1/2 hours for a 12-pound turkey (a 14- to 16-pound bird will require 2 to 2 1/2 hours. Add an extra 15 minutes per pound for larger birds). Roast the turkey until the meat at the thigh (when the thermometer is inserted without touching the bone), the thickest part of the wing and the meat at the breast registers 165 F. At this temperature, juices should be clear, not reddish pink, when thigh muscle is pierced deeply.

9. Cover the turkey breast loosely with a sheet of aluminum foil, creased in the middle to make a tent, to keep the turkey warm without steaming the crispy skin. Let the turkey rest for at least 30 minutes before carving.
